BOSTON, MA (April 10, 2016) - Project Hope, a multi-service agency at the forefront of efforts in Boston to move families up and out of poverty, announces the appointment of Christine Dixon in the agency's newly created position of Deputy Director. In this role Ms. Dixon will oversee the agency's workforce development, adult education, family child care, data shelter programs.

"I am thrilled about this new challenge," says Dixon. "I absolutely love working at Project Hope and being a part of the amazing work that goes on in this agency and in this community. The staff at Project Hope are a group of passionate and creative individuals, and I am excited about continuing to work with this dynamic team in my new role."

A licensed social worker, Dixon has worked in the field of Human Services for over 18 years. She joined Project Hope in January 2011 to work in the housing services and case management department, and she became the director of that department in 2013.

Project Hope provides low-income women with children access to education, jobs, housing, and emergency services. Project Hope also fosters personal transformation and works with the community and state for broader systems change.
